Richard Wagner

President and Chief Executive Officer

Dick Wagner's first two years as head of the Reds have had their share of rewards, and they have also shown something that Wagner intimates have known all along: that he is not afraid of making tough decisions. He had plenty of opportunities to bow to popular sentiment in 1978 and 1979, but he pursued the course he felt best for the long term good of the Reds.

Wagner certainly has the kind of diverse background and on-the-job education needed for his position as chief executive of a baseball club.

He enlisted in the Navy after high school graduation in Nebraska and followed the Pacific Coast League while stationed in San Diego as a Medical Corpsman. Upon discharge, he landed a job at age 19 as general manager of the Thomasville, Ga. club in the Georgia-Florida League. The moves were many in the minor leagues — to Flint, Miami, San Antonio, Hutchinson and finally Lincoln, Nebraska.

He left baseball in 1958 to manage the city auditorium in Lincoln for three years. Other positions included Promotion Director for Ice Capades and general manager of a radio station (KSAL, Salina, Kansas).

In 1964, a call came from a former baseball acquaintance Bob Howsam to be the promotions director with the St. Louis Cardinals.

Two years later Wagner accepted the challenge of Jack Kent Cooke to be the first general manager of The Forum, then in the construction stage in Los Angeles. But not long after his move back to the West Coast, Wagner got another call from Howsam. His old boss had moved to Cincinnati and needed a No. 2 man with the Reds. Wagner returned to baseball once more, planted roots in Cincinnati and has been an integral part of the Reds operation for the last 12 years.

Wagner tended to the Reds "business side" while Howsam concentrated on baseball's on-field activities and player development. By 1970, with the backing of Reds Chairman of the Board Louis Nippert, the Reds were transformed into pennant winners. And at the same time, fans attracted by promotions and new selling techniques were entering the turnstiles in record numbers.

When Bob Howsam announced the "changing of the guard" in February of 1978, Dick Wagner took over.

Richard Wagner was born October 19, 1927 in Central City, Nebraska. He married the former Gloria Larsen, also of Central City, in 1950. The Wagners have two children.

Roger Ruhl Vice-President, Marketing

Ruhl co-ordinates the Reds' marketing (sales, promotion, advertising, on-field activities).

He oversees the season ticket, group sales and publications departments, as well as the Reds' 580 Gift Shop. A native Cincinnatian, he graduated from West Virginia University, where he was Sports Information Director. He was an information sergeant with the U. S. Army in Vietnam and Public Relations Director with the Cincinnati Royals before joining the Reds as Publicity Director in 1971. He became the Promotion/Sales Director in 1973 and assumed his present position in April, 1978. He and his wife Lynne have a daughter.

Don Tecklenburg Business Manager

Tecklenburg returned to the Reds last October after previously serving on the Reds administrative staff from 1974 to 1976.

He oversees the Reds' accounting, stadium operations and ticket departments and coordinates the club's data processing.

A native Cincinnatian, he first started working summers for the Reds as a part-

He was named to his present position in April, 1978. His baseball career was interrupted in its early years by World War II. Bender and his wife Dotty have a son.

Joe Bowen Vice-President, Scouting

Bowen directs a network of 18 full-time scouts and dozens of part-time and recommending

Full Name: John Francis McNamara

John McNamara accomplished one of the great managing jobs in baseball in 1979 when he led the Cincinnati Reds to the Western Division championship in his first season as the Reds' manager. The Reds, a team in transition, were not considered a prime pennant contender by most baseball observers, who generally picked the team to finish third in pre-season predictions. But the quiet, soft-spoken McNamara and his staff refused to accept that assignment. The team got off to a slow start, trailed Houston by 10 games on July 4, then began an exciting stretch run that let it move into first place to stay in mid-September and finally clinch the title on the final weekend of the season. "It's satisfying and it's gratifying," said McNamara, reflecting on the season, "but we fell short of our ultimate goal — the World Series. That's what we will continue to strive for." One of the things that made winning the division title such a major accomplishment was that the Reds had to overcome a staggering number of injuries to key players. George Foster, the team's top power hitter, missed 40 games; Ken Griffey, the team's top percentage hitter, didn't play after Aug. 8; Tom Seaver, the team's top pitcher, pitched only three innings in a month; Bill Bonham, another veteran starter, sat out three weeks; second baseman Joe Morgan was in and out of the lineup. There were other injuries of shorter durations, yet the team kept winning. "That's why you can't give too much credit to the guys who came off the bench and did a job for us," said Mac. "There isn't a guy on the club who didn't contribute toward a victory." Getting the utmost out of his players was a project that began during spring training for McNamara. "I want to find out what makes them tick," he said, "and I figure I'll do that before the season starts. That's very important to me because over the years I've learned you should never look for a player to give you something he's not capable of giving." That is vital in McNamara's managerial philosophy, which he simplifies by calling it a matter of "individuals and situations. There are no absolutes. You have to look at each situation as it comes up and at the individual who is in that situation. Then you decide how to handle that situation at that time." McNamara's biggest contribution to the Reds was to make it a more pitching-oriented team. "Our No. 1 priority in spring training was to establish a pitching staff with consistency and depth. The key to our success was that we were able to do that." McNamara's success in 1979 capped a 16-year managerial career that began when he was 26 years old and still an active catcher. John worked in the minor leagues for nine years as a manager. He made it to the major leagues for the first time in 1968 as a coach for the Oakland A's, then succeeded Hank Bauer as manager of that team late in the 1969 season. His 1970 Oakland team finished second. He later managed the San Diego Padres for 3-1/2 years and was a coach with both the San Francisco Giants and California Angels.

Harry Dunlop is going into his second season as a Reds' coach, where he serves as Manager John McNamara's right-hand man in the dugout. Dunlop previously spent eight seasons as a major league coach with the Chicago Cubs and Kansas City Royals. A former catcher, Dunlop had the unusual distinction of catching three no-hitters within a 14-day span as an 18-year-old in his first pro season. One of them was the game in which Ron Neccai struck out all 27 batters. Dunlop managed for 10 years in the minor leagues, starting at the young age of 24.

FISCHER

Bill Fischer, a newcomer to the Reds' coaching staff in 1979, wasted no time in impressing the pitching staff with his knowledge of pitching technique and impressing everyone with his rare wit. The pitching coach was a vital factor in giving the Reds the best pitching the team has enjoyed in many years, particularly in the development of young hurlers, which was Fischer's specialty during four previous seasons in the Kansas City organization. Fischer spent nine seasons in the American League as a pitcher. With Kansas City in 1962, Fischer pitched 84½ consecutive innings without giving up a base on balls, which still stands as a major league record.

Full Name: Fredrick Steven Auerbach

Handyman Rick Auerbach was one of the Reds' busiest pinch-hitters in 1979 and also one of the most productive. Rick went to the plate 28 times in that role and delivered 10 times with five hits, four walks and a sacrifice fly. Auerbach particularly remembers the sacrifice fly, which was a game-winner against Philadelphia in late August and kept the team in first place. Auerbach led the entire National League in pinch-hitting during the 1978 season when he fashioned a .538 average with 7 hits in 13 at-bats. Auerbach's primary function, however, is as a combination second baseman-shortstop-third baseman. Auerbach is handy at all three positions and appeared as a starter at both short and third. In one of those assignments, Rick had three doubles and three RBIs against his former L. A. teammates at Dodger Stadium.

BAIR

Doug Bair added to his stature as one of baseball's top relief pitchers in 1979. The hard-throwing righthander had a hand in 27 of the Reds' 90 victories as he piled up 16 saves and 11 wins. The product of Ohio's Bowling Green State University suffered only by comparison with his own performance a year earlier, his first with the Reds, when he accumulated 28 saves, the third highest total in the major leagues, and also won seven games on his way to a spectacular 1.98 earned run average. Bair lacked the consistency that was his trademark in 1978, but there were stretches in which he was just as effective in 1979. One of them came shortly after the season opened when he pitched eight times in a row without allowing a run, collecting four saves and a win. That was reminiscent of his 1978 start when he didn't allow a run in his first 12 appearances to establish himself in a Cincinnati uniform. Bair had joined the team only a few weeks before from Oakland in a trade early in spring training. Bair had another excellent stretch in May and early June last season in which he permitted just one run in 10 games and was rewarded with three more saves and a pair of victories. Control problems, which had plagued him throughout his career until 1978, returned to hamper Bair's efforts. But he still had more to contribute to the Reds' championship season. The most important came in late July when the team began its stretch run that overtook the Houston Astros. The Reds put together a hot streak in which they won seven out of eight and Bair was a major factor, getting two wins and two saves while giving up just one run in five appearances.

BENCH

Catcher Johnny Bench set two all-time Cincinnati club records during the 1979 season, establishing new standards for home runs (332) and runs-batted-in (1,191) while helping the Reds to their sixth Western Division title during the decade of the 1970s. Bench virtually carried the team during a torrid five-week period from Aug. 15 through Sept. 20 when the Reds were overtaking the Houston Astros and moving into first place to stay. Bench hit safely in 26 of 29 games during that time, batting .342 with 10 homers and 22 RBIs. Most importantly, the Reds won 20 of the 29 games. During those five weeks, Bench also had an 18-game hitting streak, the longest of his illustrious career; broke the club homer record; caught his 100th game of the season; and moved past Gabby Hartnett to become No. 3 all-time among RBI-producing catchers. The only catchers in major league history who have knocked in more runs are Yogi Berra, with 1,430, and Bill Dickey, with 1,209. Bench should pass Dickey early in the 1980 season. Catching 100 or more games is annually one of Bench's top goals. He has achieved that 12 times, matching the N. L. record held by Hartnett and Al Lopez. Bench is the only one of the three who did it in consecutive seasons. Bench could equal Dickey's major league mark of 13 in both categories in 1980. Bench broke Tony Perez' club RBI record when he recorded his 1,112th in San Diego on Apr. 15. He got Frank Robinson's club home run record when he blasted No. 325 at Riverfront Stadium on Aug. 23. While Bench is proud of both records, he left no doubt how he rated them. "To become a home run king was all I ever wanted to do," he said, following his record-setting home run off Montreal's Stan Bahnsen. "I've never said a lot about how much being the Reds' home run king would mean to me. I've tried to play it down. What I've accomplished doesn't make me a Babe Ruth or Hank Aaron, but I'm proud of what I've done, very proud and I'm pleased about the way the fans recognized it. I want to hit home runs. It's in my blood." It's also in his swing. The veteran catcher stands 35th on the all-time home run list with his total of 332. Berra, with 358, is the only catcher ahead of him.

Bench twice led the N. L. in homers (45 in 1970 and 40 in 1972) and he hit 20 or more in 10 of his 12 seasons as a regular with the Reds. Yet there was a time early in the 1979 season when Bench thought his days as a power hitter might be over. A back problem, which has bothered Bench periodically during his career, caused him to get off to one of the slowest starts of his career. Six weeks into the season, Bench had only two homers, 16 RBIs and was batting .204. As the ache faded away, Bench's swing and his power returned. "When I was hurt, I couldn't feel good even when I had a good game," he said. "But when my back is OK, baseball is fun. I can swing hard and it doesn't hurt. I haven't felt this good since 1974." Bench was the premier power hitter during the decade of the 1970s. During that 10-year period, he piled up 1,013 RBIs, the most of any player in major league baseball and far ahead of former teammates Tony Perez and Lee May, who were next in line with 954 and 936, respectively. Bench's home run total of 290 for the decade was a close third behind Willie Stargell (296) and Reggie Jackson (292). Among players still active, Bench ranks sixth in homers and seventh in RBIs. Among Bench's career achievements are National League MVP awards in 1970 and 1972; World Series MVP in 1976; 10 consecutive Gold Glove awards (1968-77); and nine consecutive years of being voted by fans into the starting lineup for the All-Star game (1970-78). He has hit 2 or more homers in a game 16 times in his career, including a pair of 3-homer games. He and teammate George Foster are the only active players who have won league RBI titles three times.

Bench Catches 1626 Games

Johnny Bench remained one of the top defensive catchers in baseball history after his performance in 1979. Johnny caught in 126 games, running his career total behind the plate to 1626, only 292 short of the all-time record set by Al Lopez. Bench's career fielding percentage remained at .991, less than one point off the all-time NL mark set by Johnny Edwards. Bill Freehan holds the big league record of .993. Following is a career breakdown of Bench's defensive work:

Full Name: Bruce Michael Berenyi

Bruce Berenyi won his second ERA championship in the last three years when he led the American Association with a 2.82 mark while pitching for Indianapolis in 1979. The strong-armed righthander also had a league-leading earned run average in 1977, when he posted a 2.30 mark for Shelby of the Western Carolinas League. In between, Berenyi pitched at Nashville in 1978 and his 2.47 ERA ranked fourth in the Southern League. The 25-year-old Ohio native is continuing to fulfill the promise Reds' scouts saw when they made him the team's No. 1 draft choice (secondary phase) in the June, 1976 selections. Berenyi's first competition at the triple-A level was impressive. In addition to his ERA championship, Bruce also led the American Association in strikeouts with 136 and in shutouts with three. His complete games included a one-hitter, a two-hitter and a three-hitter. But perhaps his most startling accomplishment was pitching the entire season without allowing a home run. Berenyi is the nephew of Ned Garver, who had a 14-year major league career that included a 20-win season for the St. Louis Browns.

BONHAM

Righthander Bill Bonham made big strides in his battle to come back from elbow surgery in 1979 and is confident of making it all the way back this year. The veteran pitcher had to sit out three weeks early in the season because of a shoulder problem he developed while being protective of his recuperating elbow. When he returned to action, he pitched remarkably well considering that he was throwing no breaking pitches. It was a concession he had to make as he worked to regain his arm strength. "I have to go out there and try to fool the hitters," Bonham said. "With this team's good defense, I can get by if I get the pitches where I want them." But Bonham found out that would eventually catch up with him. A meeting with Manager John McNamara and pitching coach Bill Fischer convinced Bonham he had to start throwing breaking pitches again. "The hitters were looking for everything straight. I realized I had to have another pitch." Bonham found quick success with his curve ball. His next four outings included a 3-1 complete game two-hitter against Atlanta; a four-hitter against Philadelphia that the Reds won 2-1 and seven shutout innings in a 1-0 win over the Mets. Bonham lacked consistency during September and sat out the Championship Series with a forearm problem. But he was given a clean bill of health during off-season checks and should be ready to go again in 1980.

The slender native of the Dominican Republic has had more wins and a lower ERA each year as he has moved up into tougher competition in the farm system. His eight complete games in 1979 included three shutouts.

Brown led the Southern League pitchers with a 2.40 mark, while winning nine of his 11 decisions. A year earlier, he won the Florida State League ERA crown with a 1.31 mark. Brown was a high draft choice in 1975 despite the fact his high school had no baseball team. He caught the eye of Red's scouts by pitching 12 no-hitters in a semi-pro league.

Full Name: David S. Collins

Dave Collins was a major factor in the Reds' come-from-behind drive to the Western Division title in 1979. The scrappy, aggressive outfielder started every game after the All-Star break and performed in superb fashion to finish with a .318 batting average, by far the best of his five major league seasons. Collins' enthusiasm was infectious on the Reds and he seemed to be in the middle of almost everything the team got going. "Every time Collins plays, he contributes something," said teammate Ray Knight, in mid-season when Dave was performing as the team's best pinch-hitter (.321 on 9-for-28) and getting occasional starts at first base and in the outfield. Collins got his big chance when George Foster was injured in the All-Star game. Manager John McNamara immediately put Collins and his .348 average into the lineup on a regular basis and Collins made the most of his opportunity. "I can't do what Foster can," said Collins. "Nobody alive can do what he does. But I know I'm playing well enough so that people can't say we're losing because Foster is out of the lineup. Right now I don't think there is a better leadoff hitter in the league than me. I can run as fast as anyone, I hit from both sides of the plate, I make contact, I get on base and I score runs. I'm just trying to find a permanent home in the lineup. If I continue to do the job, Mac is not going to take me out of the lineup when Foster returns." That decision was made for McNamara when Ken Griffey was sidelined for the season just as Foster was returning. Collins moved to right field and continued his spectacular play. Collins earned N. L. Player of the Week honors in late August when he batted .500 on 12-for-24 with 4 runs, 4 RBIs and 5 stolen bases. Collins' .318 average was compiled with near-perfect consistency, as the switch-hitter batted .317 from one side of the plate and .319 from the other. Collins continued his fine play in the Championship Series where he batted .357 and was involved in the most controversial play of the Series on a ball that he either trapped (as umpire Frank Pulli ruled) or caught cleanly (as the TV cameras seemed to indicate).

Geoff Combe was named the Outstanding Pitcher in the Southern League as well as the Most Valuable Player of the Nashville team after the busy relief pitcher spent the summer watching hitters lunge after his dipping fork ball. The righthander piled up a league-leading 27 saves to go with five wins and a sizzling 2.07 earned run average. It was his second consecutive outstanding season at Nashville, where he had 12 wins, 9 saves and a 1.89 ERA in 1978.

Full Name: David Ismael Concepcion

Dave Concepcion came through with the best overall offensive season of his career in 1979 while maintaining his status as the best shortstop in baseball by winning a Gold Glove award for the fifth time in the last six years. Concepcion's spectacular play is so consistent that it is sometimes taken for granted. But there was one happening early in the season that surprised even Dave. The Venezuelan sent a pitch from Montreal's Bill Lee soaring into the red seats, the upper level at Riverfront Stadium where only 12 home runs have been hit in 10 seasons. "I never thought I could hit a ball up there," said Dave. "That's the big man's section." The fact is that Concepcion has become a big man for the Reds, both literally and figuratively. Physically he long ago was transformed from the skinny, all-arms-and-legs youngster into a solid, physical, strong adult. The final transformation into his status as one of the Reds' "big" men came during the 1979 season when Manager John McNamara alternated Concepcion between the No. 3 and No. 5 spots in his batting order. Dave came through with his career high totals of 16 homers, 84 RBIs (second on the club) and 91 runs scored. "Dave doesn't have a home run swing," pointed out teammate George Foster, a man who knows a thing or two about hitting home runs, "but he doesn't need one. He's got that good, quick swing that will let him hit from 15 to 20 home runs. And there's no other shortstop in the league who can drive in runs the way Davey can." Some of his RBIs came in bunches. Concepcion was one of only three National League players to hit two grand slam homers in 1979. Still, it was the RBI department that gave Dave one of his few disappointments last season. He was chasing the club record for RBIs by a shortstop, but fell short by three of the mark of 87 held since 1947 by Eddie Miller. Few would bet against Concepcion eventually getting the record, however, and possibly the club record of 20 homers by a shortstop, set in 1966 by Leo Cardenas, as well. In addition to his prowess with a glove and bat, Concepcion remains a dangerous runner, stealing 19 bases in 26 attempts to run his career stolen base total to 220, the fourth best in club history. Concepcion was named National League Player of the week early in May when he batted .423 on 11-for-26, including three homers and 10 RBIs. He also had a red-hot streak shortly after the All-Star break at a time when the Reds were beginning their stretch run for the Western Division title. During a 10-game hitting streak, Concepcion had 19 hits in 41 at-bats, a .463 pace. Concepcion was named by UPI as the shortstop on its post-season National League All-Star team.

Steady Vic Correll did another fine job as the backup catcher for Johnny Bench in 1979, a position that the veteran is ideally suited for. "I know how to handle my job," he says. "It's like my whole training, my whole life, has been to prepare me to be right here." Correll goes to the ball park, most days, knowing that he is unlikely to get into the game. Yet he must keep himself always ready to step in on those days when Bench is injured or needs a rest. Correll played in 48 games in 1979, 37 of them as the starting catcher. "I just want to be ready to plug the holes that need to be plugged." Because the Reds carried just two catchers on the roster, it was a rare pleasure for Correll to get to the plate as a pinch-hitter, but he made the most of his one chance in 1979. In the heat of the pennant race, on Aug. 14, Correll was sent to the plate in the 10th inning to face the Phillies' Steve Carlton, who was pitching a brilliant three-hitter and had fanned 12 Reds. Vic ripped a game-winning double to give the Reds a 2-1 decision.

CRUZ

Outfielder Hector Cruz was one of the Reds' best newcomers in 1979 and a major factor in the team's stretch drive that produced a Western Division title. The 26-year-old Puerto Rican thrust himself into the Reds' outfield picture for 1980 with his enthusiastic and often spectacular defensive play as well as with his timely hitting. Hector is one of three brothers to make it to the major leagues. He spoiled the season for one of them, Jose, who is the regular left fielder for Houston, which had to settle for second place in the Western Division race. A younger brother, Tommy, has played for the Texas Rangers. Hector was rusty when he first joined the Reds in late June after a trade from the San Francisco Giants. He had gone to the plate just 25 times in three months. But he quickly caught the eye of Ted Kluszewski, the Reds' hitting instructor. "Hector is strong and quick with the bat," said Klu. "He has a sound swing, he's a good student and he works hard." That hard work paid off for Cruz when he got a chance to play regularly. From July 25 through the end of the season, Cruz hit a solid .279. He was the team's best hitter during August when he batted .344 with four homers and 14 RBIs, including four game-winners. Like his brother Jose, Hector was signed originally by the St. Louis Cardinals and piled up impressive credentials in the Cardinal farm system. Hector was named MVP in the Texas League in 1973 after leading the league in homers, RBIs and total bases. He was the American Association MVP two years later when he hit .306 and knocked in 116 runs for Tulsa. That year, the Sporting News named him as their "Minor League Player of the Year." Hector showed his power to the National League in 1976 when he hit 13 homers and knocked in 71 runs as a rookie third baseman for the Cardinals. The Cruz family joins the DiMaggios, Boyers and Alous as the only four families to send three brothers to the major leagues.

DRIESSEN

Dan Driessen was at his best late last season when the Reds were putting the finishing touches on their come-from-behind battle with the Houston Astros to win the Western Division title. From Labor Day until the Reds clinched the title on Sept. 28, the first baseman hit at a .342 pace, batting safely in 18 of the 21 games, and knocking in 13 runs. One of his RBIs was a ninth inning home run at Dodger Stadium that won a 2-1 game, a ball that caromed over the fence off the glove of outfielder Derrel Thomas as he leaped at the wall. Driessen ran the bases looking back over his shoulder, still not sure if Thomas had caught the ball. He would not have been surprised. It had been that kind of a season for him. "I've never seen so many line drives get caught, so many balls hit straight at somebody," Driessen lamented. "It seems like the other team has too many men on the field when I'm hitting." Still, 1979 was a disappointment to Driessen only from the standpoint of his batting average. He finished with 18 homers, the most of his career, and 75 RBIs, his second best total ever. He had nine game-winning RBI's, third highest on the team. Driessen also had another exceptional year defensively, making just nine errors while covering far more range than most first basemen in the major leagues. Driessen's late surge with the bat was not his only good one during the year. He hit safely in 13 out of 14 games during the last two weeks of May, a .370 hot streak in which he had 13 RBIs in the 14 games. There was a time in June when he slugged four homers in a five-game span. His main problem was that he lacked consistency, matching his hot streaks with cold ones that ruined his average. It was a problem that Ted Kluszewski, the Reds' batting instructor, related to the 1978 season, when Driessen messed up his swing after being hit twice by pitches on his right elbow. "Last year, the problem was physical," offered Kluszewski. "He got all fouled up because of the pain in his elbow. That pain is gone now, but in the process he learned to hit a different way. He developed some bad habits and they're hard to break. They're the easiest habits to acquire and the hardest to break."

Tom Foley continued to impress with his defense as the sure-handed shortstop anchored the Tampa infield. The 20-year-old narrowly missed the Florida State League fielding championship after winning that honor a year earlier in the Western Carolinas League with Shelby. Foley was a high school sensation in Miami, FL., where he was an ambidextrous quarterback as well as one of the city's top baseball stars.

FOSTER

Outfielder George Foster has had some incredible seasons in recent years on his way to becoming the top power hitter in baseball, but the 1979 season may have been the most remarkable of all. He finished among the National League leaders in homers (30), RBIs (98) and average (.302), as usual, but this time he did it in spite of sitting out 40 games because of injuries and appearing in five others only as a pinch-hitter. He had 19 game-winning RBIs, only one short of the league lead. "I wanted to be a 20-game winner," quipped Foster, "so I would have a chance to win the Cy Young Award." Pitchers around the league don't laugh at Foster's comments. They don't think anything he does is funny. In the last four seasons, Foster has hit more homers (151) and had more RBIs (488) than any other player in the major leagues. Now Foster has more bad news for them. Regarded as one of the strongest men in the game, George spent the off-season in a vigorous conditioning program. "My injury showed me that I hadn't developed my body to the point where it could withstand the original pull that I aggravated in the All-Star game (pulled adductor muscle in his right thigh). Now I know it is up to me to get into better condition and make certain this doesn't happen again." Foster was strong enough in 1979 to convince Philadelphia Manager Danny Ozark he had to be cheating. Ozark accused him of using an illegal corked bat after watching a home run sail about 475 feet into the seats in center. "It isn't cork in the bat that does it, it's the iron in here," Foster said with a laugh, pointing to his massive forearms. "I guess I should consider that a compliment, that he thinks nobody could hit a ball like that without it being illegal." Foster's response the next day was to hit three homers in a doubleheader against the Phillies. Foster was named the N. L. Player of the Month in April for batting .383 with 4 homers and 22 RBIs in 21 games. He repeated in June when he hit .345 with 13 homers and 32 RBIs in 29 games. He also won the award twice in 1976 and twice in 1977. Other highlights during the season were his 1,000th major league hit on June 29 in San Francisco and his 200th major league homer (196 as a Red) off Bob Shirley of San Diego at Riverfront Stadium on Sept. 25. He twice hit two homers in a game, giving him 18 multiple-homer games in his career, including a 3-home run game in 1977. One of his 1979 homers came with the bases loaded, the eighth grand slam of his career, second highest total in Reds' history. Foster also made his "annual" excursion into the red seats, hitting a towering drive off San Francisco's Tom Griffin on Sept. 6. Since Riverfront Stadium opened in 1970, only 12 home runs have been hit into the red seats (top deck) and five of them belong to Foster. Foster had an eventful off-season, too. He got married on Nov. 3 and took his bride, Sheila, on a honeymoon trip to Japan where he also took part in an exhibition tour of major league All-Stars. Foster was voted MVP of the tour.

               and Jimmy Stewart, 11-29-71
 Full Name: Cesar Francisco Geronimo

There are no specific statistics kept on the subject, but Cesar Geronimo probably leads the major leagues in sending rival hitters grumbling back to the dugout after watching their blasts into right-center and left-center disappear into his glove. The veteran outfielder has few equals when it comes to patrolling center field, a fact attributed to by Geronimo's collection of Gold Glove Awards. The 31-year-old native of the Dominican Republic won four of them in a row from 1974 through 1977. A series of injuries in 1978, which limited his playing time, broke that streak of gold, but Cesar showed again in 1979 that he can still run down almost any fly balls that stop short of the fence. What many baseball observers fail to remember is that Geronimo also averaged .278 as a hitter during that 1974-1977 period. Geronimo fell off badly in that department in 1978 when his average fell to .226 and he's anxious to make rivals respect his bat once again. He made it halfway back in 1979. By the middle of July, Cesar was hitting .262 and had virtually equalled his entire 1978 production in runs, hits, doubles, triples and RBIs. Cesar has never had the kind of picture swing that is sought for training films, but the thing that counts is results. When he is in a hot streak, the ball finds a way to get through the defense, whether it is a line drive, a ground ball, a flare or a freak bounce. Geronimo had such a streak in late May and early June when he hit at a .486 pace through 11 straight starting assignments, including nine doubles among his 18 hits, and knocked in 10 runs in those 11 games. He had another 11-game stretch in July in which he batted .364. There was a 7-game hitting streak in August in which he hit .423 and had six RBIs. Geronimo saved his 1979 heroics for the fans at Riverfront Stadium, where he hit a respectable .270. It was the road that did him in. Geronimo was a different player while wearing the gray road uniform, hitting at only a .204 pace.

Ken Griffey

No.: 30

Position: Outfielder

Born: 4-10-50, Donora, PA.

Resides: Cincinnati, OH.

Ht.: 6-0 Wt.: 195

Married: Alberta Littleton

Children: George, Jr. (11-21-69),

Craig (6-3-71)

Acquired: No. 29 draft choice, regular phase, June, 1969

Full Name: George Kenneth Griffey

Outfielder Ken Griffey was on the way to one of his finest seasons when a mid-August operation put a premature end to the 1979 season. The fleet outfielder, who had been bothered by his left knee since mid-June, underwent surgery on his left kneecap and thigh bone on Aug. 14 and spent the rest of the year and off-season recuperating. Winter checkups indicated Griffey was making good progress and he should be ready to resume his exceptional career this season. Griffey's .310 career batting average put him in a tie with Boston's Jim Rice and Kansas City's George Brett for fifth place among all major league hitters during the decade of the 1970s. Griffey had a challenge of a different type facing him as he went into the 1979 season. The Donora, PA., native was asked to put his superior speed (156 infield hits and 102 stolen bases during his five full major league seasons) to use as the team's new leadoff man. "I won't try to change my batting philosophy," insisted Griffey. "I just want to get the bat on the ball. I'll be more patient, but hits are the name of the game for me. I'm going to the plate looking for hits, not walks." Griffey found what he was looking for and got off to the finest start of his career. He hit safely in 14 of the first 15 games and 23 of the first 25, carrying a .361 batting average into the second week of May. Griffey's success brought out a quick needle from Lou Brock, long one of baseball's top leadoff men. "I know being a leadoff man isn't that easy," kidded Brock. "Doesn't Griffey know a leadoff man isn't supposed to get a hit every time he leads off? He's hitting like a guy having a pleasant dream." That dream turned into a nightmare for Griffey in late May and early June when his average plummeted to .280. "I've been trying to do too much, do things I have no business trying to do. I've been trying to drive the ball out of the park and that's not my style," admitted Griffey. The nightmare was a short one and his average began to steadily climb again. Then the nightmare of the knee problem surfaced in late June and was with Ken off and on until the surgery ended his season. In spite of the injury, Griffey boosted his average from .284 to its final .316.

Paul Householder emerged as one of the brightest prospects in the farm system with an outstanding season at Nashville in 1979. The 21-year-old outfielder, a native of Columbus, OH, is that rare find who combines speed, power, defense and throwing ability. He was one of the major factors in leading his teammates to the Southern League championship. Householder had a solid .283 batting average to go with 20 homers and 95 RBIs. His RBI total ranked second in the league. Playing right field, Householder had 16 assists to rank second among outfielders and he had the best fielding percentage (.989) among all outfielders. Paul also had 21 stolen bases. A second round draft choice in June, 1976, Householder was named to the Florida State League All-Star team at Tampa in 1978 and followed that by making the Southern League All-Star team in 1979.

HUME

Pitcher Tom Hume went into the 1979 season fighting to hold onto a spot in the Reds' starting rotation and came out of it as one of the premier relief pitchers in baseball. From the All-Star game on through the end of the season, the 26-year-old righthander made 28 relief appearances, earned 15 saves and four wins and had an incredible 1.44 earned run average. His overall ERA of 2.76 was the second best in the major leagues last season. Hume went into the final week of the season with a chance to become the first Reds' pitcher to lead the league in ERA since Ed Heusser accomplished that feat in 1944. Tommy added two more scoreless relief appearances during the week, but Houston's J. R. Richard pitched 16 scoreless innings in his last two starts to win the title, 2.71 to 2.76. Hume had been dividing his time between starting and relieving, trying to find the best way to utilize his obvious talent. It was shortly after the All-Star break that Manager John McNamara put Tommy into a game-saving situation in Pittsburgh. Hume stopped the Pirates cold for a save. Two nights later, in Atlanta, Tommy repeated the feat and the following day did it again. A star was born. McNamara had found the "stopper" he needed for the Reds' stretch drive to the Western Division title. From Aug. 1 through Aug. 30, Hume worked 21 innings in 13 games without allowing a run. For the full season, Hume's figures as a relief pitcher came out to 45 appearances, 17 saves, 5 wins and a 2.02 ERA. Writers covering the team voted him the Johnny Vander Meer Award as the Reds' Outstanding Pitcher for 1979. While it all happened suddenly for Hume, he says that "I'm not worried about it disappearing just as suddenly. I have built confidence in my pitches. I'm more aggressive. All through my life I've had control problems. Now I'm just throwing strikes. Bill Fischer (the Reds' pitching coach) helped me with my delivery and with a lot of little things." No small part of Hume's success is the close friendship he developed with Tom Seaver. "I ask him questions all the time," says Hume, "about game situations, what pitches to use, when to use them. I want him to tell me everything he knows about pitching."

KENNEDY

Infielder Junior Kennedy isn't looking for anybody to hand him anything on a silver platter. He just wants a chance. "I know what my job has been here," he said during the 1979 season. "I accept the fact that Joe Morgan is ahead of me. But if Joe leaves, I'd expect to be given the same good shot to win the second job that Ray Knight got at third." That chance presented itself to Kennedy going into spring training with the second base job wide open. Kennedy has shown during two solid years as Morgan's backup job that he will give anyone a tough battle for the job. "Junior would be a regular on a lot of teams," said Manager John McNamara. "He is that good. He plays hard, works hard, does his job and never, never complains." The 29-year-old Oklahoman bounced around the minor leagues for 10 years prior to getting his chance with the Reds in 1978 and he made the most of it, doing the job both offensively and defensively whenever he was called on. "I come to the ball park every day as if I'm going to play," explains Kennedy. "I think that helps me be ready." Due to Morgan's injuries in both 1978 and 1979, Kennedy became a semi-regular, starting a total of 89 games at second base. "I can't do the big things to win a game, like hit the ball out of the park," says Junior. "I've always been a spray hitter. I try to move the ball around. I have to do a lot of little things to get the job done." In his starting assignments, he hit .273 both years.

Ray Knight

No.: 25*Position: Third Baseman*Born: 12-28-52, Albany, GA.*Resides: Albany, GA.*Bats: Right Throws: Right*Ht.: 6-2 Wt.: 185*Married: Terri Schmidt*Children: Brooks (6-20-79)*Acquired: No. 10 draft choice, regular phase, June, 1970*Full Name: Charles Ray Knight

If Ray Knight could have written the script in advance, he would hardly have changed a word about his 1979 season. He got a chance to play regularly, performed brilliantly in the field, finished the season with the third highest batting average in the National League and received two first place votes as the Most Valuable Player in the league. The year was topped off in December when he learned that writers covering the Reds had voted him the Ernie Lombardi Award as the Reds' MVP. Not bad for a fellow who spent last spring hearing every writer and broadcaster in Florida ask him how he was going to handle the pressure of replacing Pete Rose. "The funny thing about it," Ray said, during spring training, "is that this is the first time since I joined the team that I've had real peace of mind. I feel like I'm part of something." There was never any doubt about Knight's fielding ability at third base. He had been outstanding defensively throughout his six years in the Reds' farm system and he had spent the 1977 and 1978 seasons as Rose's late-inning defensive replacement. Knight still had to convince people that he could hit major league pitching. So Ray batted .348 during spring training and led the team with 16 RBIs. Perhaps the only disappointment of the year for Ray was that he sprained an ankle late in spring training. After waiting so long for his chance, he spent Opening Day sitting in the dugout. But he was able to pinch-hit in the second game and made it into the lineup by the third game, anxious to convince one and all his spring performance was no fluke. Nobody really expected him to hit like Rose, who had a lifetime .310 average during his 16 years with the Reds, but Knight was ready for the challenge. By the first of May, he had his average at that same .310 mark and it never fell below .300 the rest of the season. "There were times the past two years when I thought I'd never get this chance," Knight admitted. "I felt like Pete Rose was going to play here forever. They tell you if you work hard, you'll get your break. Well, this is my break and I'm not going to let anybody take it away from me." Knight had the answer for every challenge. When his teammates started kidding him about not hitting any homers, he connected off Vida Blue and eventually hit 10 for the season, including a grand slammer off Will McEnaney on July 19 in St. Louis. Knight's final average of .318 not only led the Reds, but was the third highest in the league. He had 79 RBIs, including nine game-winners, one of the best totals on the team. Knight accomplished all of this despite a series of injuries to his ankle, hand, thumb, shin and shoulder that had his teammates calling him "Battlescar Gallactica." The injuries seldom got him out of the lineup, however. "I've always played hurt. I'm a very hyper person," says Knight. I want to play so badly I sometimes let my desire overrule my better judgment." Among the other highlights of Knight's season was the birth of his first child, a son named Brooks, and this accolade from Johnny Bench: "Knight is the best all-round third baseman I've seen on the Reds since I've been here."

Full Name: Michael James LaCoss

Mike LaCoss went into the 1979 season looking for a job in the Reds' pitching rotation and came out of it as one of the top pitchers in the National League. The tall, lean righthander not only compiled a 14-8 record, but earned a spot for himself in the All-Star game along the way. The 23-year-old LaCoss has never lacked confidence in his own ability. During spring training, when he was still battling for a spot on the roster, he said, "I think I can win 15 games if I'm in the rotation from the beginning." While Mike fell one game short of that goal, his pitching was instrumental in many more wins than that. By the middle of June, Mike had an 8-0 record and was leading the league with a 2.33 ERA. The Reds had won all 13 games he had started. "Every time Mike goes out there he thinks he's going to win," observed teammate Ray Knight. "He's cocky. He thinks he can get every hitter out. That rubs off on the rest of us. When he's pitching, you feel like you're gonna win, that you're always going to be in the game." Even when Mike eventually lost, he was impressive, dropping 3-2 and 2-1 decisions. "All I've asked for is the opportunity to show what I can do," he says. "I'm getting it and I think I can maintain a high standard. I'm progressing. I thrive on tough competition. The sooner you feel you're part of what's going on up here, the more you relax and the better you perform." LaCoss maintained his high standards right through the end of August before hitting a September slump. By the end of August, his record was 14-5 and the Reds had won 21 of his 28 starts, a remarkable statistic. LaCoss seldom lets his emotions show, a deliberate action on his part that was helpful in learning to control a temper that was one of Mike's biggest hurdles on the way to the majors. He even maintained that lack of emotion when he made his first All-Star appearance. There was a capacity crowd at Seattle Kingdome and the game was on the line when he was summoned out of the bullpen to face a bases-loaded situation with the American League holding a 6-5 lead. LaCoss retired the Angels' Don Baylor, and then turned in an additional scoreless inning to give the National League a chance for a 7-6 comeback win.

Charlie Leibrandt continued to ride baseball's skyrocket in 1979. In a pro career that spanned just 16 months, the lefthanded pitcher moved from Miami University in nearby Oxford, Oh., to an appearance in the National League Championship Series against Pittsburgh, stopping at three levels in the Reds' farm system along the way. The 23-year-old is a polished pitcher that belies his relative inexperience and could well bid soon for a spot in the Reds' starting rotation. Leibrandt pitched much better than his 8-14 record at Indianapolis in 1979. His 2.94 ERA was second to teammate Bruce Berenyi among all pitchers in the American Association and his 100 strikeouts ranked fifth in the league. Leibrandt was also the top fielding pitcher in the league, handling 57 chances without an error. He joined the Reds in September and did not allow an earned run in three appearances. Leibrandt was made eligible for post-season play when Bill Bonham developed an arm problem.

Righthander Paul Moskau was hoping to start off the 1979 season the same way he closed out 1978, when he pitched four strong games and had a 3-0 record in September. Paul had to bide his time, but when Tom Seaver had to bow out of a late April game with an injury, he was ready to take the challenge. Moskau took over in the third inning and finished the game, allowing only two hits and no runs to record his first victory. Moskau reeled off three straight victories when he got a chance to replace Seaver in the starting rotation, running his record to 4-0. Moskau lost his next start, 2-1, on two unearned runs, then lost another heart-breaker by the same score and was never able to get back in a winning groove. He was sent to the Indianapolis farm team on Aug. 1, but pitched in only two games there because of an injury. One of the games went in to the American Association record books as the first four-pitcher, no-hitter in the league's history. Moskau worked the first three innings, followed by Davis May, Sheldon Burnside and Angel Torres. Moskau has had a winning record during each of his five years in the Reds' organization. He pitched in tough luck for the Reds in 1978 when he posted a 6-4 record that could have been much better. He had 15 no-decision starts and the Reds won 12 of them.

Ron Oester, recognized by baseball people as one of the finest infield prospects in the game, will be trying a new position in 1980 as he tries to become the Reds' second baseman. The gifted athlete, a Cincinnati native, has been a shortstop throughout his six seasons in the Reds' farm system. Oester long ago caught the eye of baseball scouts with his powerful, accurate throwing arm and his fluid range in the field, but he has been steadily progressing as a hitter as well. Oester's batting average has moved up through each of his three seasons at the triple-A level and he was the top hitter on the Indianapolis team in 1979 with a .281 average. Oester also had a career high 23 stolen bases. Oester, a product of Cincinnati's Withrow High School, was with the Reds in September, then went to the Florida Instructional League for three weeks of intensive work with former infielder Woody Woodward, the Reds' farm system field coordinator, to learn the ins-and-outs of playing second base.

PASTORE

The 1979 season was like a rollercoaster ride for Frank Pastore. During the year, Pastore made the big jump from Class AA to a starring role with the Reds as a relief pitcher, dipped back to Indianapolis for seasoning with the triple-AAA farm team, then soared back to a starring role as a late-season starter with the Reds. Through the last two months of the season, the hard-throwing righthander had a 5-2 record and a 2.10 ERA. His victories included a 7-1 complete game at Houston in the most critical game of the season and a 4-hit shutout over Atlanta five days later that let the Reds clinch the Western Division title. Frank wasn't even thinking about events like those when he went to the Tampa training camp last spring. He was a starting pitcher with a lot of promise in the farm system, hoping to move up from Nashville to Indianapolis. Pastore kept getting hitters out all spring and a dazzling 5-inning performance against the Red Sox came just when an injury to Mario Soto convinced Manager John McNamara he needed another relief pitcher. Frank finished the spring having allowed only 8 hits in 15 innings over six games. He flew to Cincinnati to open the season and worked three shut-out innings on Opening Day. That rollercoaster ride took him to four saves and a win in the first few weeks of the season. But his lack of experience eventually caught up with him and it became obvious he needed more seasoning. The ultimate blow was a night at Dodger Stadium in which he was rocked for five homers in a 10-run 2.1 inning relief stint. "There comes a time when you have to pay your dues," said Pastore. "It was a humbling experience. I really got lit up." Pastore went to Indianapolis and worked on a curve ball to complement his fast ball. After building a 7-2 record with five complete games in 10 starts, Pastore hurried back to Cincinnati for another soaring ride on that rollercoaster. Now he's ready to prove he's here to stay.

Righthander Manny Sarmiento knows what it is to have a good early season and a good late season. Now the lean Venezuelan is trying to find the secret of how to combine all of that into one season. Sarmiento closed out the 1979 season with a flourish, allowing only one run in September during seven relief appearances that totalled 15.2 innings for a 0.56 ERA. Manny had been one of the most effective pitchers in the major leagues in the early part of the 1978 season. By late June, he had compiled a 6-3 record and a 1.88 ERA. Sarmiento, like many young pitchers, has to develop consistency to go along with his obvious talent. Although he has had eight seasons in the Reds' organization, Sarmiento will only be 24 years old when the 1980 season begins. He was 16 when he signed his first pro contract, having been spotted by Reds' shortstop Dave Concepcion, who saw Manny playing baseball in Venezuela and recommended the Reds sign him. Sarmiento was playing shortstop at the time, but he has been a pitcher throughout his pro career. Manny began the 1979 season with the Reds' Indianapolis farm team, where he had a win, two saves and a 2.37 ERA for 19 relief assignments, earning him a return to the parent team in June.

Full Name: William Joseph Scherrer

Bill Scherrer had a spectacular season for the Reds' Tampa team in the Florida State League. The 22-year-old lefthanded pitcher had a 12-3 won-lost record to go with a 1.81 ERA that ranked second in the league. Scherrer, up with the big club for the first time, was chosen as the lefthanded pitcher on the Florida State League's post-season All-Star team. The hard-throwing pitcher fanned 140 batters in 159 innings and his 10 complete games included four shutouts. Scherrer did not allow a home run all season.

SEAVER

Tom Seaver had one of the most satisfying seasons of his career in 1979 as he rebounded from an early season back problem to win 14 of his last 15 decisions and was a dominant figure in the Reds' drive to the Western Division championship. Along the way, the veteran righthander won 11 straight games, the longest winning streak of his illustrious career and the best by a Cincinnati pitcher since Brooks Lawrence won 13 in a row 23 years earlier. Seaver finished the season with a 16-6 record to lead the National League in winning percentage (.727). His victories included a league-leading five shutouts, boosting his career total to 52, tops among active pitchers and tying him with Juan Marichal for 10th place on the all-time shutout list. Seaver has been able to maintain his status as one of baseball's greatest pitchers while making the adjustments that all power pitchers eventually face. "Pitching now is more rewarding, more gratifying," he says. "When I used to strike out 13 and pitch a 3-hit shutout, that was a physical effort. But it's more enjoyable when I'm mentally fatigued when the game is over. That's because the mental aspect is more important." Still, Seaver is not yet ready to concede his power days are behind him. "I'm certainly not the power pitcher I used to be, but I am still a power pitcher. The fast ball is still my best pitch. I'm not as overpowering as I once was, but that doesn't mean I don't have the fast ball when I need it. I've always worked on pitches I could use someday in my career. To me, pitching is using what you have on that particular day. That can change within the context of the game. I have to constantly make adjustments in my pitching during a game. That's what makes it rewarding. You scratch and claw and all of a sudden you end up winning, 4-3." But Seaver did more than scratch and claw during the 1979 season. He made 16 starts during his 11-game winning streak and his earned run average in those games was a sensational 1.98. That is vintage Seaver. Tom gave early indication of what kind of a season it might be when he threw a 2-hit shutout against

Atlanta on April 19. But then he was hit by a lower back sprain and was able to pitch just 3.1 innings in the next 30 days. It was not until June 9 that Seaver was to win again, but he left no doubt that he was back and ready to go. Facing Montreal, Tom gave up an unearned run early and then retired 24 consecutive batters. That was the start of his best-ever winning streak. Along the way he pitched a 3-hitter in San Francisco in which he retired 21 straight batters and a 6-hitter in St. Louis to record his 50th shut-out. "That's great," said Seaver, kidding himself. "I've got 50 shut-outs. I only need 63 more to catch Walter Johnson." But make no mistake. Seaver is proud of his accomplishments. "I'm just not obsessed with numerical goals. I'd like to win 300 games, obviously, but I can't see hanging around to do that if I'm not pitching well. I want a career in which I'm a very consistent pitcher. If you're consistent, the numbers will be there in the end." The numbers that are already there are impressive enough. His career ERA of 2.55 ranks second behind Walter Johnson among all pitchers with 3,000 or more innings. His victory total of 235 ranks 41st on the all-time list and trails only Gaylord Perry, Jim Kaat and Ferguson Jenkins among pitchers active in 1979. Seaver can, indeed, be thinking about reaching the 300 victory mark, which has been achieved by only 14 pitchers in baseball history. Seaver also moved up a few more notches on the all-time strikeout list, now standing fifth with 2,887, which puts him in range of the 3,000 mark in 1980, a total reached by only three pitchers. He has struck out 10 or more batters in a game 68 times in his career and led the league in strikeouts five times. Seaver won the N.L. Cy Young Award three times in his career — 1969, 1973 and 1975.

Seaver 5th on Strikeout List

Tom Seaver moved into fifth place on the all-time strikeout list in 1979 with a career total of 2,887. The only active pitchers with more are Gaylord Perry at 3,141 and Nolan Ryan at 2,909. Following is a list of the top 10 all-time strikeout leaders:

Full Name: Mario Melvin Soto

Righthander Mario Soto was anxious for the start of spring training so he could take up where he left off in the spring of 1979 and show Manager John McNamara he is ready for steady work with the Reds. The slender 23-year-old from the Dominican Republic was having a spectacular spring and seemed well on his way to nailing down a bullpen job when he was sidelined by injury. At the time, Soto had allowed just three hits and struck out 10 batters in eight innings of relief work. But the regular season had begun before he was ready to pitch again and it was the end of June before he made it back into a Reds' uniform. Mario had some rocky moments when he first joined the team, but everything fell into place for him in Pittsburgh on July 26 when he allowed only two hits in a solid six-inning performance that provided his first win of the season. "Soto was finally able to relax and didn't force himself," observed catcher Johnny Bench. "He had a great changeup to go with his great fastball." It was the start of a solid streak of work by Soto. In his next nine relief appearances, totalling 11.1 innings, Mario allowed just one run and picked up two more wins. Soto has always been able to throw hard, averaging nearly seven strikeouts per nine innings throughout his pro career. But it was the addition of an effective changeup that put Soto on the trail to the major leagues.

SPILMAN

Infielder Harry Spilman, who puts a gleam in the eye of every baseball scout who has ever watched him swing a bat, progressed to the Reds' roster midway through the 1979 season after another solid performance with the Indianapolis farm team. Spilman was hitting .288 when he got the summons to join the parent team in late June. Harry started games for the Reds at both first base and third base, but his primary function was as a pinch-hitter. His most memorable moment in that function came on July 30 when Manager John McNamara sent him to the plate against the Dodgers with the bases-loaded and the score tied in the eighth inning. Harry delivered a two-run double to win the game. "I know I'm not going to get to the plate a lot this season," said Spilman, of his pinch-hitting role, "so I want to be ready when I'm called on. That's why when the team is at home, I'm at the park early every day to take extra practice." Spilman believes in planning for all contingencies. He and his bride, Kim, even sent out their wedding invitations with two possible dates for the ceremony. Harry was still playing for Indianapolis when the original date was set, but that fell during the National League Championship Series. Spilman's promotion and the Reds' division title put the wedding temporarily on "hold." Spilman's move to the majors was inevitable. In 1978, in his first try at the triple-A level, he hit .295 with 13 homers and 79 RBIs and the American Association managers voted him the "Best Hitting Prospect" in the league.

Lefthander Dave Tomlin didn't have the glossy record in 1979 that he posted in 1978 when he won nine of his 10 decisions, but there was no doubt in anyone's mind that he was a much better pitcher. Tomlin's earned run average dipped from a fat 5.81 in 1978 to an excellent 2.64 last season, the lowest mark on the Reds' staff. Tomlin pitched in 53 games last year and has averaged nearly 60 appearances over the last six seasons with the Reds and San Diego Padres. But the veteran usually doesn't stay around very long to have a chance for victory. His role, generally, is to walk into a tense situation, face a lefthanded hitter or two, then retire for the day. He pitched one inning or less in 32 of his 53 appearances. Tomlin is a product of the Cincinnati farm system, even though most of his major league service was spent with the Padres. The native of Maysville, Ky., just upriver from Cincinnati, was with the Reds during parts of the 1972 and 1973 seasons before heading west and didn't return to the Reds until spring training of 1978.

Outfielder Duane Walker came through in 1979 with the kind of season that Reds' scouts expected after making him the team's No. 1 draft choice in the secondary phase of the 1976 January draft. The lefthanded hitter was voted the "Best Hustler" in the Southern League after he led the league with 15 triples and finished fourth in both the batting race with a .303 average and the stolen base race with 46 steals in 56 attempts.

PLAYER LIMITS: 40 until opening day, when the number must be reduced to 25 until September 1, when it again becomes 40.

DETERMINING BATTING AVERAGE: Divide the number of at bats into the number of hits.

DETERMINING AN EARNED RUN AVERAGE: Multiply the number of earned runs by nine; take the number and divide it by the number of innings pitched.

DETERMINING SLUGGING PERCENTAGE: Divide the total bases of all safe hits by the total times at bat (At bats do not include walks, sacrifices, hit by pitcher, or times awarded first base because of interference or obstruction).

DETERMINING PERCENTAGE OF GAMES WON AND LOST: Divide the number of games won by the total games won and lost.

CONSECUTIVE HITTING STREAKS: A consecutive hitting streak shall not be terminated if the plate appearance results in a base on balls, hit batsman, defensive interference or a sacrifice bunt. A sacrifice fly shall terminate the streak.

CONSECUTIVE-GAME HITTING STREAKS: A consecutive-game hitting streak shall not be terminated if all the player's plate appearances (one or more) result in a base on balls, hit batsman, defensive interference or a sacrifice bunt. The streak shall terminate if the player has a sacrifice fly and no hit.

CONSECUTIVE-GAME PLAYING STREAK: A consecutive-game playing streak shall be extended if the player plays one half-inning on defense, or if he completes a time at bat by reaching base or being put out. A pinch-running appearance only shall not extend the streak. If a player is ejected from a game by an umpire before he can comply with the requirements of this rule, his streak shall continue.

TRADING REGULATIONS: Players are available on waivers in reverse order of standings, at the time waivers expire, if more than 30 days after start of the season; otherwise in reverse order of standings at close of preceding season.

History of the Reds

Professional baseball began in Cincinnati 108 years ago, not at Riverfront Stadium, but on a spot where Union Terminal on Cincinnati's near West Side now stands.

Baseball has certainly progressed quite a long way from the days of Harry and George Wright and that first game on May 15, 1869 when the Cincinnati Red Stockings defeated the Antioch Nine of Yellow Springs, Ohio, 41-7.

The history of the Cincinnati Reds is one of the richest of any professional sports team and it is filled with countless firsts, unique happenings and little-known facts that could keep a trivia buff reading for years.

The first Red Stockings team that was organized by Harry Wright, a Newport, Ky., jeweler, was fabulous. During the first two years of play the team went 130 consecutive games without a loss before the Brooklyn Atlantics finally beat the Red Stockings in June of 1870.

In 1876 the National League was founded and the Red Stockings became a charter member, although the club dropped out of the league for 10 years because the league would not permit sale of beer in the park. The Red Stockings joined the American Association for the 1882-83 seasons and also played in the Union Association, but rejoined the National League in 1890.

The turn of the century saw one of the most colorful men ever associated with the team take over the presidency of the club. August "Garry" Herrmann was the club president from 1902 until 1927 when he was forced to retire because of blindness.

A host of famous players paraded through the Herrmann regime. Noodles Hahn was a standout pitcher and Cy Seymour won the Reds' first batting championship, hitting .378 in 1905, a mark that still stands in the Cincinnati record book.

And later came Edd Roush, an all-time great centerfielder, and Heinie Groh, the famous third baseman who used a bottle bat. They formed the nucleus of Cincinnati's first pennant winner in 1919 and then beat the Chicago White Sox in the World Series.

The Reds came close the next few years, but couldn't match up with John McGraw's powerful New York Giants. Players such as Eppa Rixey, who holds the club record with 179 career wins and Bubbles Hargrave, the first catcher ever to win a batting title kept the Reds in the running during the 20's, but there wasn't another pennant until 1939.

After Herrmann resigned control of the club in the late 20's, Sidney Weil assumed command. When the depression crippled him, Powel Crosley purchased the Reds, more for civic purposes than any other cause. It was strongly rumored that the Cincinnati franchise might be moved and Crosley felt that the City needed a major league baseball team.

Crosley, the famous radio tycoon, was sold on the franchise by Larry McPhail, the club's general manager. MacPhail, who had made a name for himself at Columbus, was one of the early promoters and opened up a new era of baseball when the Reds became the first team to play at night. Lights were installed at Crosley Field and the Reds and Phillies met in the first night game on May 24, 1935.

Two years later a new chapter opened in Cincinnati as Warren Giles was named the club's general manager. Although the Reds finished last in Giles' first year, the team began to move in 1938, jumping to fourth. By 1939 the club had matured into the National League's best. The Reds won back to back pennants in '39-'40 and captured the World Series in 1940, beating the Detroit Tigers in an exciting seven-game series.

Some of the great names of Reds' history were on those clubs. Paul Derringer, Bucky Walters and Johnny Vander Meer were well-known pitchers. Ernie Lombardi, Frank McCormick and Walters were Most Valuable Player winners.

World War II and age caught up with the Reds in the 40's and the club began rebuilding in the late 40's and early 50's. Ewell Blackwell became the only pitcher to pitch in six consecutive All-Star games. Ted Kluszewski was signed off the Indiana University campus.

But Giles left the Reds in 1951 and was named President of the National League. His successor was Gabe Paul who put together a powerful hitting team in the mid-fifties. The Reds nearly won the pennant in 1956, losing by two games to Brooklyn, but the fans fell in love with this team. The Reds hit the million mark in paid attendance for the first time and in '56 they tied the NL record for most team home runs, 221. Birdie Tebbetts was named Manager of the Year.

Fred Hutchinson took command of the Reds in 1960 and in '61 they startled most baseball "experts" by winning the NL pennant. Frank Robinson, who had been Rookie of the Year in 1956, was Most Valuable Player, and Vada Pinson nearly won the batting title. Under Hutch, who died of cancer in 1964, the Reds remained close. They won 98 games in 1962, but finished third. They came within one game in 1964.

Rumors again spread in 1966 that the Reds would leave Cincinnati. They were silenced quickly, however, when a group of businessmen headed by Francis L. Dale purchased the Reds and pledged allegiance to the city with a 40-year lease, thus assuring construction of a new stadium.

The group named Bob Howsam General Manager in 1967, and six years later he moved up to the club presidency. In 1978 Dick Wagner was elected President of the Reds with Howsam assuming the title of Vice-Chairman of the Board.

Sparky Anderson became the manager in 1970 and guided the team for nine seasons, being replaced by John McNamara in November, 1978.

The Reds moved into Riverfront Stadium June 30, 1970, ending a long association with Crosley Field, and before that Redland Field. A total of 4,543 games were played at the old park which was officially dedicated April 11, 1912. It was Redland Field then and became Crosley Field after Crosley purchased the Reds.

The Team of The '70s

The Cincinnati Reds, the Team of the 70's, closed out the decade the same way they began it—with a championship. From 1970, when the team won its first Western Division title, through 1979, when it won its sixth Divisional race, the Reds won more games and more titles than any other major league team.

The Reds piled up 953 regular season victories in the ten years of the 1970's, an average of 95.3 per season and an impressive mark of consistency.

The two teams involved in the 1979 World Series were the Reds' top challengers. Baltimore won 944 regular season games and Pittsburgh won 916.

And Reds fans were rewarded with a total of 12 championships by the Reds, six Western Division titles (1970-72-73-75-76-79); four National League titles (1970-72-75-76); and back-to-back World Championships in 1975 and 1976.

Oakland, with 11 titles in a five-year period, was next. Pittsburgh now has 10 titles and Baltimore has 9.

The 70's will be remembered not only for the championship appearances (detailed on pages 110-116) but for the many memorable moments that were packed into that 10-year period.

Reds fans said goodbye to Crosley Field and the first century of baseball's oldest professional team June 24, 1970 and six days later, a little over two years after the first spadeful of dirt was turned, Riverfront Stadium opened to a crowd of over 50,000 cheering fans.

The All-Star game came to Cincinnati that year and it was a good one, with the National League winning in the 12th inning when Pete Rose crashed into Cleveland catcher Ray Fosse to score the winning run. Johnny Bench, at 22 years of age, won the Most Valuable Player Award that year, the first of six awards Reds players would garner in the decade.

Through the decade, Bench combined with players such as Lee May, Tony Perez, Joe Morgan and George Foster to form a power-packed lineup that became known as "The Big Red Machine."

In 1978, Pete Rose became the 13th player in history to get 3,000 hits and later that year he put together a 44-game hitting streak, longest in modern National League history.

As the decade progressed, the Reds asserted themselves more and more with their pitching. Tom Seaver was acquired in 1977 and he joined a talented crop of hurlers developed through the Reds farm system.

The 1979 team, which wrote the final chapter of the 70's, did not possess the overpowering attack that marked the World Championship teams of 1975 and 1976. But under Manager John McNamara, it was a team that won the hearts of the fans for the way it continually overcame adversity to produce another title.

The team also provided, partly by design and partly by necessity, the opportunity for some new faces to emerge, the young players who could provide the basis for building a team of the 80's.

Robert L. Howsam

Vice-Chairman of the Board

Bob Howsam served as the Reds chief executive for 11 years. His present role involves representing the club at Major League and National League meetings as well as making himself available for consultation on various phases of the operation.

The Howsam Years will be remembered as glory ones in Reds history. He took charge of running the Reds in 1967 after a successful tenure as General Manager of St. Louis. Strengthening the farm system and establishing long-term promotion and public relations programs (like Straight A) were among his first moves. He presided over the move from Crosley Field to Riverfront Stadium in 1970, the year the Reds came of age on the field.

The Big Red Machine's success in the seventies is well documented – five division titles, four National League Pennants, and back-to-back World Series wins in '75 and '76. Howsam was named baseball's Executive-of-the-Year in 1973.

Robert L. Howsam is a Colorado native. His days in baseball go back to 1948 when his family purchased and ran Denver's minor league club. He was one of the founders of the American Football League, owning the Denver Broncos in their early years. After a few years in the investment business, he returned to baseball in 1964 to take over the Cardinals. His move to Cincinnati came in 1967.

Born Feb. 28, 1918, Howsam is married to the former Janet Johnson. They have two sons, Robert of New York City and Edwin, who lives in Phoenix and is a Reds Scouting Supervisor.

Cincinnati Reds Most Valuable Players

Eight different Cincinnati Reds have won National League Most Valuable Player of the Year honors since the award was first established in 1931.

Six times during the 1970's a Reds player captured the honor, two each by Johnny Bench and Joe Morgan and one each by George Foster and Pete Rose.

The first Reds winner was Ernie Lombardi in 1938. Others to win were Bucky Walters, Frank McCormick and Frank Robinson.

Following is a capsulized summary of each Cincinnati player's MVP winning season:

ERNIE LOMBARDI (1938)—This Cincinnati catcher won the National League batting title with a mark of .342, becoming only the second backstop in baseball history to win the swat crown. Lombardi played a big role in Cincinnati's climb from eighth place in 1937 to fourth place in 1938. Lombardi collected 229 votes, 63 more than runnerup Bill Lee of Chicago.

BUCKY WALTERS (1939)—This righthanded pitcher, who won 27 games against only 11 losses, sparked the Reds to their first pennant in 20 years. Walters also led the league in earned run average at 2.29 and tied for the most strikeouts. He received 303 votes in the balloting while Johnny Mize was runnerup with 178.

FRANK MCCORMICK (1940)—This righthanded hitting first baseman batted .309 and led the league in doubles sparking the Reds to their second straight NL pennant. McCormick also led the league in hits for the third straight year and knocked in 127 runs. He received 274 votes, 65 more than runnerup Johnny Mize.

FRANK ROBINSON (1961)—This Reds rightfielder sparked Cincinnati to the pennant with his timely hits and consistent power. Robinson batted .323, hit 37 home runs and knocked in 124 runs. He collected 219 votes, 102 more than runnerup Orlando Cepeda.

JOHNNY BENCH (1970)—This Reds catcher became the youngest MVP ever when he was a landslide winner at the age of 22. Bench led the majors in home runs (45) and runs batted in (148), becoming the first catcher since Roy Campanella in 1955 to win. He received 326 votes, only 10 short of the maximum attainable. Billy Williams was runnerup with 218.

JOHNNY BENCH (1972)—Johnny became the first Cincinnati repeat winner in the MVP balloting as he out-distanced Billy Williams for the second time. Bench hit 40 home runs and knocked in 125 runs. He received 263 votes to Williams' 211.

PETE ROSE (1973)—The Reds captain won his third batting championship and set a club record with 230 hits as he won his first Most Valuable Player Award. Rose batted .338 sparking Cincinnati to its second straight division championship. Rose received 274 votes, just 24 more than Willie Stargell in one of the tightest MVP races ever.

JOE MORGAN (1975)—This Reds second baseman, who batted .327, hit 17 home runs and knocked in 94 runs, was a whopping MVP winner. It was the largest winning total in history as Morgan amassed 321½ points to runnerup Greg Luzinski's 154 points.

JOE MORGAN (1976)—Morgan became only the second player in National League history to win the MVP back-to-back. Only Ernie Banks of Chicago, in 1958-59, had accomplished this. Morgan batted .320, hit 27 homers and knocked in 111 runs. He collected 311 votes to teammate George Foster's 221.

GEORGE FOSTER (1977)—Foster crashed 52 home runs and knocked in 149 runs, top-notch credentials for MVP selection. The hard-hitting Reds leftfielder also batted .320. He collected 291 votes, compared to 255 for Philadelphia's Greg Luzinski.

Reds Three-Time All-Star Hosts

The All-Star game has been played in Cincinnati three times since it was first begun in 1933.

Twice it was staged at Crosley Field — in 1938 and 1953 — and once at Riverfront Stadium, in 1970. All three games saw the National League win.

Post-Season History

1979 Championship Series

The 1979 National League Championship Series will be remembered by Reds fans for controversy and two ultra-close games as the Pittsburgh Pirates got a measure of revenge against the Reds in Cincinnati's sixth appearance in the playoffs since the current structure was instituted in 1969.

The Reds had twice swept the Pirates in the playoffs in 1970 and 1975 and added a five game playoff victory in 1972. Now it was the Pirates' turn for a pennant, though not without down-to-the-wire games in two of the three contests.

Game 1 began as a pitchers' duel between each club's ace — Tom Seaver of Cincinnati and John Candelaria of Pittsburgh. Seaver restricted the Pirates to five hits, walking two and striking out five in the eight innings he pitched. The two hits, however, a home run by Phil Garner and a triple by Omar Moreno, came in the third inning and staked Pittsburgh to a 2-0 lead. The Reds matched those runs in the bottom of the fourth inning when George Foster followed Dave Concepcion's leadoff single with a blast into the first row of Riverfront Stadium's center field green seats. The 2-2 deadlock extended the game into extra innings, with the next score coming by the Pirates in the top of the 11th. Tim Foli and Dave Parker led off the inning with singles. Willie Stargell then hit Tom Hume's first pitch into the rightfield seats for a home run. The Reds didn't give up though, as Concepcion singled and Foster and Johnny Bench walked bringing the winning run to the plate. Pirate reliever Don Robinson held the Reds in check from that point to win, 5-2.

Game 2 was another extra-inning win for the Pirates, though many of those watching the television replay of the playoff's most controversial call would argue that extra innings might not have been necessary.

The Reds had scored a run in the second inning on pitcher Frank Pastore's sacrifice fly, but the Pirates came back with a run when Tim Foli scored on a force out.

An inning later came the call. It was a diving hit off the bat of Phil Garner that Dave Collins made, by the indication of the television replay, a diving catch on. Umpire Frank Pulli ruled it a "trap," however, and Garner eventually scored on a double by Tim Foli.

The Reds earned extra innings with back to back doubles by Hector Cruz and Dave Collins in the 9th inning, but the Pirates won the game in the 10th when Dave Parker threaded a ground ball through the left side of the infield to score Omar Moreno.

With that momentum and a return to their home park going for them, the Pirates made it three in a row with a 7-1 win before going on to defeat the Baltimore Orioles in the World Series.

Championship Series History

The Reds have played in over half of the National League Championship Series since they first began in 1969 when baseball went to divisional play. Cincinnati has made six appearances in the post-season playoffs, winning four of the six. Following is a summary of those Championship Series:

1970 — The Reds made their first appearance in the Championship Series in 1970 — the second year of the post-season competition — and swept three straight games from the Pittsburgh Pirates.

In the opener that year Gary Nolan and Dock Ellis each pitched nine scoreless innings before the Reds broke loose for three in the 10th. Pete Rose singled home pinch-hitter Ty Cline, who had led off with a triple, getting the Reds on the scoreboard and Lee May followed with a two-run insurance single.

The Reds won the second game 3-1 as Bobby Tolan scored three times. Jim Merritt recorded the victory. And in the final that year the Reds beat the Pirates 3-2 as Tolan singled home Rose with a two-run insurance single.

The Reds won the second game 3-1 as Bobby Tolan scored three times. Jim Merritt recorded the victory. And in the final that year the Reds beat the Pirates 3-2 as Tolan singled home Rose with the winning run in the eighth inning.

1972 — This Series is one of those unforgettable ones. It was the Series of Johnny Bench's dramatic home run; of Roberto Clemente's last game; of Bob Moose's wild pitch.

Pittsburgh won the opener 5-1, but the Reds came back to even things up with a 5-3 triumph in Game 2. The Pirates took a 2-1 advantage after the third game as they scored a 3-2 decision. But in Game 4 Ross Grimsley pitched a two-hitter — both hits were by Clemente — as the Reds stormed to a 7-1 triumph. Then came the big fifth game.

The Pirates led 3-2 going to the bottom of the ninth inning. Bench, who was facing Dave Giusti, fouled off several pitches before drilling a game-tying home run over the right center field fence. Then with two outs, George Foster was on third base when Moose uncorked a wild pitch. Foster came home and the Reds won the pennant with a 4-3 victory.

1973 — This Series went five games, too, and it was the first one the Reds lost.

The 1973 Series will long be remembered for the Game 3 incident involving Rose and Bud Harrelson who started a brawl that brought both benches on to the field and a barrage of debris from the Shea Stadium stands.

The Reds won the Series opener, 2-1, as Bench hit a ninth inning home run. The next day it was 5-0 Mets. The Mets beat the Reds 9-2 in Game 3, which was held up about 20 minutes while order was being restored.

Rose was the Reds' hero in Game 4. He hit a 12th inning game-winning home run to tie the series. But in Game 5 Tom Seaver was the winner, 7-2, as the Mets snapped a 2-2 tie in the fifth with a four-run outburst.

1975 — Stealing 11 bases in 11 attempts, the Reds won the National League pennant with three straight victories over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Joe Morgan stole three bases sparking an 8-3 opening game win while Ken Griffey stole three more in a 6-1 triumph in Game 2. Griffey was a big hitter in Game 1, knocking in three runs while Tony Perez and Dave Concepcion sparked the offense in Game 2 with three hits each.

The Reds overcame a 14-strikeout performance by John Candelaria to win Game 3. Concepcion and Rose hit home runs as the Reds won the game 5-3 in 10 innings.

1976 — Cincinnati made it another sweep, this time over the Philadelphia Phillies. Comebacks highlighted the Reds win.

The Reds won the opener, 6-3, sparked by Pete Rose, who raised his lifetime LCS batting average to .378 during the Series.

In the second game, Jim Lonborg held the Reds hitless until the sixth inning when the Reds exploded for four runs, wiping out a 2-0 deficit. The big blow of that inning was a three-run error off the glove of Richie Allen.

Cincinnati made one of their patented Frank Merriwell finishes in Game 3. Trailing the Phillies 6-4 in the bottom of the ninth, George Foster and Johnny Bench homered off Ron Reed to tie the score. Then moments later Dave Concepcion slid safely across the plate, scoring on Ken Griffey's high bounding infield hit.

World Series History

The Cincinnati Reds have played in four World Series during the 1970's and a total of eight overall — 1919, 1939, 1940, 1961, 1970, 1972, 1975 and 1976. Following is a history:

1919

Cincinnati's first appearance in a World Series was a successful one. The Reds beat the Chicago White Sox five games to three in what was then a nine game World Series.

Earle "Greasy" Neale, who would later gain fame in college and professional football, was the star of the Series for Cincinnati. He batted .357 to spark all hitters. On the mound Hod Eller won a pair of games.

The White Sox held the NL batting champion, Edd Roush, to a .214 average but he was sensational on defense, saving nearly a dozen runs in the eight games with circus catches.

1939

The New York Yankees swept the Reds in four straight games in the '39 World Series. It was a pitching dominated Series as the Yankees hit just .206 while the Reds batted .203. New York out-scored the Reds 20-8 and hit seven home runs to the Reds' none. Charlie Keller was the Yankees' star, batting .438 with three home runs. Frank McCormick hit .400 for Cincinnati.

Red Ruffing beat Paul Derringer, 2-1, in the Opener while Monte Pearson hurled a two-hit shutout as the Yankees won the second game, 4-0. New York won Game 3, 10-5 and then captured the Series with a 7-3 triumph in the fourth game.

1940

This Series went to the wire with the Reds beating the Detroit Tigers, 3-2, in the seventh game to capture the World Series.

Derringer and Bucky Walters each won two games for Cincinnati while Buck Newsom won a pair for Detroit. Newsom beat Derringer, 7-1 to win the opener, but Walters knotted the Series with a 5-3 victory in Game 2. Tommy Bridges beat Jim Turner in Game 3 as the Tigers scored a 7-4 triumph, but Derringer came back from his opening game defeat to even the Series once more, 5-2, breaking a Series jinx for him that started with his first appearance in the 1931 World Series.

Detroit went back on top three games to two in Game 5 as Newsom blanked the Reds, 8-0. Walters saved the Reds from elimination in Game 6, however, as he hurled a shutout, 4-0, setting the stage for the first Game 7 in a World Series in seven years.

The Reds scored two runs in the seventh inning to come from behind and win the game and the Series, 2-1. The winning run came home on Billy Meyers' long sacrifice fly.

1961

The Reds and the Yankees met for the second time and New York won this World Series, four games to one. The Yankees won the American League pennant as Roger Maris broke Babe Ruth's home run record with 61 and they didn't let up in the Series.

Whitey Ford got New York off and running in the opener with a two-hit, 2-0 victory. But Cincinnati tied the Series the next day as Joey Jay pitched a 6-2 decision.

Game 3 went to New York, 3-2, as Maris hit a game-winning home run in the ninth inning. Ford pitched six more shutout innings in Game 4, a 7-0 Yankee triumph. And then they finished off Cincinnati with a 13-5 victory in Game 5.

1970

Brooks Robinson dominated this World Series from Baltimore, both at the plate and in the field. He batted .429 and time after time thwarted the Reds with diving catches at third base. It was a five-game Series with the Reds winning Game 4.

The Orioles won the opener, 4-3, as Robinson hit a game-winning home run in the seventh inning. It was in this game that the now famous Bernie Carbo — Elrod Hendricks — Ken Burkhart collision took place.

Ty Cline hit a chopper up the first base line. Umpire Burkhart signaled fair as he straddled the base line in front of the plate. Whirling Hendricks attempted to tag Carbo as he came flying down from third. As Hendricks whirled, he knocked Burkhart to the seat of his pants and he lunged at Carbo. The Reds argued that Hendricks tagged Carbo with his glove, but the ball was in his right hand. The Reds protested but the play stood with Carbo out.

Game 2, without a wild scene, was won 6-5 by the Orioles. In Game 3 Baltimore scored a 9-3 triumph as Dave McNally became the first pitcher ever to hit a grand slam in Series play.

Lee May's three-run homer in the eighth inning of Game 4 saved the Reds from elimination 6-5, but Mike Cuellar cruised to a 9-3 Series-clinching triumph in Game 5.

1972

This was one of the closest World Series of all time. Six of the seven games were decided by one run.

Gene Tenace hit a pair of home runs in the opener as the Oakland A's beat the Reds, 3-2. Game 2 went to Oakland 2-1 as Joe Rudi made a ninth inning leaping catch to save the game for the A's.

Jack Billingham pitched a three-hit, 1-0 win in Game 3 to get the Reds going, but Oakland won the fourth game with a 3-2 win, scoring twice in the bottom of the ninth.

Game 5 was Cincinnati's from the first pitch, a home run by Pete Rose. In the end the Reds won it, 5-4, as Joe Morgan threw out John Odom at the plate to end the game. The only lopsided game went to Cincinnati in Game 6, 8-1. The A's won the Series the next day, 3-2.

1975

This Series was called by many the most exciting ever. The Reds won it in Game 7 as Morgan knocked in the winning run with a two-out, two-strike single.

Luis Tiant pitched a shutout in the first as Boston took a 1-0 lead. But in Game 2 the Reds scored twice in the ninth and came from behind, 3-2. Game 3 was Cincinnati's, 6-5 in 10 innings, as Morgan delivered the winning hit. Tiant evened the count in Game 4, though, nipping the Reds,

5-4, thanks to a five-run Boston fourth.

Tony Perez hit a pair of home runs in Game 5 as the Reds scored a 6-2 win. Then in Game 6 the Red Sox won the game as Carlton Fisk hit a home run in the bottom of the 12th inning.

That set the stage for game 7. The Reds trailed 3-0 going to the sixth, but Perez hit a two-run homer. Pete Rose singled home the tying run in the seventh and in the ninth Morgan delivered his game-winner.

1976

The Reds became the first National League team in more than 50 years to win two consecutive World Championships when they swept the Yankees in four straight games. Not since the New York Giants of 1921-22 had a NL team won two straight titles.

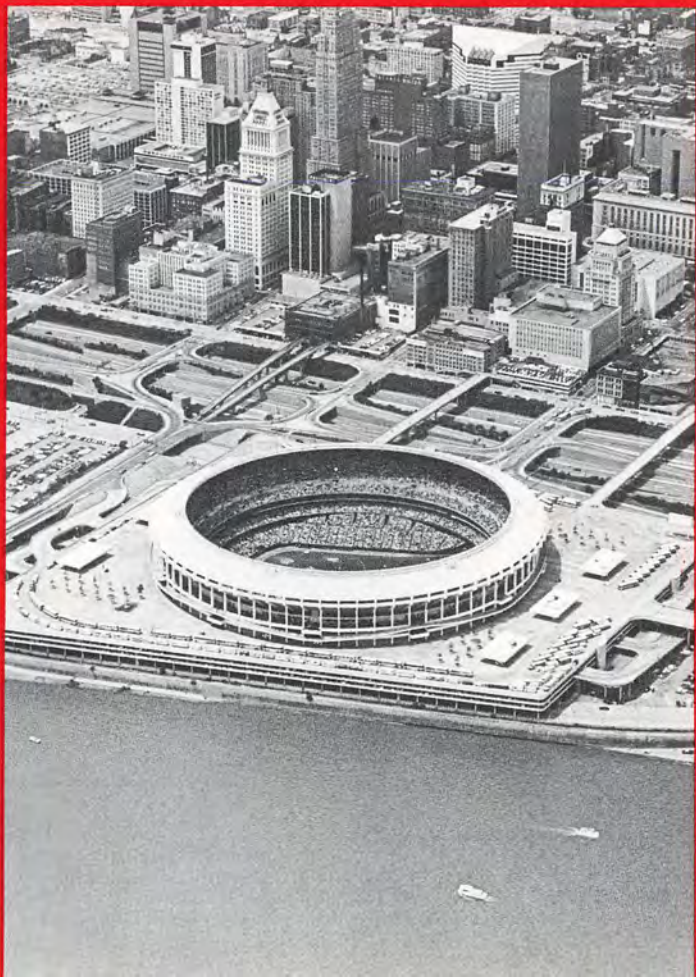

Cincinnati outscored New York 22-8 in the convincing victory. Johnny Bench led the Reds onslaught. He batted .533, the fourth highest World Series batting average ever, as he was selected the MVP of the Series.

Bench had plenty of help as the Reds batted .313 as a team. The pitching staff posted a nifty 2.00 ERA.

Riverfront Stadium

Riverfront Stadium has been the home of the Cincinnati Reds since midway through the 1970 season when the new ball park was opened for the first time. Seating capacity is 52,392.

Construction of Riverfront started in 1968 and the Reds played their first baseball game in their new home park against the Atlanta Braves on June 30, 1970. It was built for an estimated cost of $40,000,000. The stadium was financed through revenue bonds issued by Hamilton County and backed by the City of Cincinnati.

It was the first stadium of its kind to feature Astro-Turf on nearly all of the baseball diamond, with only sliding areas around the bases, the pitcher's mound and the batter's box not being covered by the artificial turf.

The stadium sits in the middle of a large parking garage. Three levels of parking accommodate 3,612 cars while the top or plaza level has spaces for 75 buses and vans. Another 1,657 cars can be parked on surface lots to the East and West of Riverfront while within a 12-block radius of the stadium there is enough parking to handle approximately 20,000 more automobiles.

Inter-State highways 75, 74 and 71 make it easily accessible from most parts of Reds Country. The recent completion of the I-275 circle freeway, the first in the nation to cross three states, also helps Riverfront-bound motorists from Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana.

The baseball field is symmetrical in design with measurements reaching 330 feet down each foul line, 375 feet in the power alleys in left center and right center and 404 feet to the deepest part in center.

Lighting is about the best in any professional sports stadium. More than 1,700 1,000 watt bulbs turn night into day at Riverfront.

A flood wall protects against high waters from the Ohio River. In case of a flood, entrances can be sealed off so that flood waters would be in garages, but the playing area, locker rooms, etc., would be dry. The flood wall protects against waters up to 78 feet deep.

For the statistically minded, the stadium required 370,000 lineal feet (70 miles) of reinforced concrete piling; 162,000 cubic yards of reinforced concrete; 9,500 tons of structural steel; 13,000 tons of reinforced steel; 600,000 square feet of masonry and 123,000 square feet of Astro-Turf.

Reds Tops in Attendance

The Cincinnati Reds drew more than two million fans to Riverfront Stadium in 1979 for the seventh consecutive year, and no team in the history of professional baseball has ever done better. The Reds and Los Angeles Dodgers share the new record, having matched strides with two million attendance seasons from 1973 through 1979.

A total of 2,356,933 fans saw the Reds play at Riverfront this past season. The Reds passed the 2.3 million marker for the fifth consecutive year. That is also a major league attendance record, all the more remarkable because Cincinnati comprises the second smallest market in major league baseball.

Only 12 other teams in baseball history have ever topped the two million mark at home and the Reds were the first team ever to draw 2.5 million for three years in a row. They did that from 1976-78.

The Reds had a total home paid attendance of 22.6 million fans during the decade of the 1970s, nearly 13 times the total population of metropolitan Cincinnati. That's the highest ratio of attendance to population, by far, of any major league baseball team.

The Reds' attendance total of 22,603,795 includes regular season games, Championship Series in 1970-72-73-75-76-79, and World Series in 1970-72-75-76. The Reds had more than one million fans for post-season games alone, the only team to surpass the million mark.

Only one team in baseball, the Los Angeles Dodgers, attracted more fans for home games than the Reds. The Dodgers, drawing from a metropolitan population of 9.3 million, had just over 25 million fans for the decade. To achieve the same ratio as the Reds, the Dodgers would have had to draw 121 million fans.

The Reds and Dodgers were the only teams to surpass 20 million attendance during the 1970s. Philadelphia, with a metropolitan population of 5.1 million, attracted 19.6 million fans to home games.

Riverfront Attendance Led Post-Season List

The two National League Championship Series games played at Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium drew the two largest crowds for any of major league baseball's 14 post-season games.

The two National League Championship Series games played at Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium drew the two largest crowds for any of major league baseball's 14 post-season games.

The Reds' opening game of the NLCS against Pittsburgh attracted a paid crowd of 55,006, the sixth largest baseball crowd ever at Riverfront. The paid attendance for Game 2 was 55,000, the seventh largest Stadium throng.

Reds Farm System

Reds Farm System Develops Winners

The Reds aren't really complaining, mind you, but there is a drawback to consistently being around the top of the standings in your league, the way the Reds have been in recent years.

"It means we pick 22nd, 23rd or 24th in the draft," Reds Vice President for Scouting Joe Bowen explains. "But that just means we have to work harder to get good, quality players. Still and all, I think we've done all right."

That is an understatement. Reds Vice-President for Player Personnel Sheldon "Chief" Bender oversees the farm system that develops those players into major leaguers. And it has an impressive record. Cincinnati stars Johnny Bench, Dan Driessen, Tom Hume, Ray Knight and Mike LaCoss are just some of the players on the Reds roster that are products of the Reds' farm system. Others are on their way.

A look at the Most Valuable Players on the Reds' six farm system teams gives an indication of how the Reds have built a successful franchise on the field.

Pitcher Jeff Lahti of the Class A Greensboro farm team was a high draft choice, selected in the fifth round in June, 1978. Indianapolis's Ron Oester (9th round, June, 1974) and Tampa's Tom Lawless (17th round, June, 1978) were players taken in the middle rounds of the draft, while infielder Rod Johnson of Billings was a very late draft, selected in the 35th round this June. Geoff Combe, named the Outstanding Pitcher in the Southern Association with Nashville, was signed out of tryout camp, while pitcher Frank DeJulio, Eugene's Most Valuable Player, had his contract purchased by the Reds after his first pro season from Auburn, an independent team in the New York-Penn League.

Overall, it was a good year for the Cincinnati farm system teams, with Nashville's Southern Association Championship and Billings' late season surge to grab a share of a divisional title the highlights.

The highlights at the Reds AAA affiliate at Indianapolis mainly revolved around the play of loop All-Star shortstop Oester and a pitching nucleus that ranked 1-2-3 in earned run average in the American Association.

Cincinnati native Oester, a product of Withrow High School, batted .281, led the team with 23 stolen bases and, along with infielder Mike Grace, solidified the team's defense. Pitcher Bruce Berenyi had a 2.82 E.R.A. to lead the league, immediately followed by Charlie Liebrandt, 2.94, and reliever Doug Corbett, 2.96. Jay Howell led the Indians in wins with 10.

Combe's Southern League record 28 saves and 2.07 earned run average was probably the top story for the Reds' AA affiliate, but certainly not the only one. The Sounds were also led during their championship drive by league All-Stars Paul Householder, who had 20 home runs and 94 runs batted in to go with a rifle arm, and Duane Walker, whose 46 stolen bases and 14 triples topped the team. And Dave Van Gorder, who hit .284, continued to emerge as the Reds' best catching prospect since Johnny Bench. Rafael Santo Domingo's .312 batting average led the Sounds in that department.

At Tampa, pitching was the story again, as the Tarpons finished a close second in their division in both halves of the season. No fewer than nine hurlers had earned run averages under 3.10. Bill Sherrer, who had a 12-3 record to go with 1.81 E.R.A., was named to the Florida State (Class A) All-Star team along with catcher Steve Christmas and third baseman Nick Esasky. Tampa also had the top base stealer in the Reds' organization in M.V.P. Lawless, who had 60 thefts.

Lahti had 11 saves and a 7-2 record for Greensboro of the Class A Western Carolinas League. He was joined on that loop's All-Star team by outfielder Tony Walker, who had a team high .277 batting average with nine home runs and 27 stolen bases.

DeJulio had 100 strikeouts and only 26 walks in 95 innings with Class A Eugene, posting a 2.27 earned run average.

Billings electrified the Class A Pioneer League by winning its last ten games to grab a share of the division title. Johnson batted .345 to lead the Mustangs while loop All-Stars Keefe Cato and Nick Fiorillo combined for 18 wins against just three losses.

The spring training home for the Reds is Tampa, Fla., about 1,000 miles down Interstate 75 from Cincinnati. This is the 47th year of training in Tampa since the Reds first went to the Cigar City in 1931, training there continuously except for three years during World War II when travel restrictions sent the Reds to the Indiana University campus in Bloomington.

The Reds play their home Grapefruit League pre-season games at Al Lopez Field on Tampa's West Side. The field is named in honor of Hall of Famer Al Lopez, a Tampa native.

Early training and site of Cincinnati's minor league spring headquarters is Redsland, a $250,000 complex consisting of four baseball diamonds, a central observation tower, four batting cages and three warm up pitching areas.

Redsland, which is located three blocks south of Al Lopez Field on Tampa's Dale Mabry Avenue, is built on a 1,000 by 1,230-foot lot. It was constructed in 1969 after the Tampa Sports Authority built Tampa Stadium on the Reds' former minor league complex.

This spring the Reds play a 29-game pre-season schedule, including three split-squad games. Thirteen of the games will be played at Al Lopez Field.

Cincinnati pitchers and catchers report to Redsland Feb. 26 with the first workout scheduled Feb. 27. The remainder of the squad reports March 2 with the first workout March 3. The first pre-season game is March 13 against the Boston Red Sox at Winterhaven.
